

Current methods to diversify are not working, and while people of color are acutely in tune with severe inequities in the workplace, their white counterparts are less aware.

The best solution to mitigating racist hiring practices and reaching racial equity in corporations may be a legal intervention requiring parity in interviewing diverse candidates.

Davis is the founder and CEO of First Workings, a nonprofit.